

March 2013

We love to read! The children in the Red room have many opportunities to read. Besides a daily book browse time after lunch, and large-group story time during our circle time and library time, children love to pick out books from our classroom library and read by themselves and with each other. We have built an extensive library of quality fiction and non-fiction children's literature. Our library allows us to pull out just the right book to address children's interests and needs. For example, we have books about ants we take out when children start watching the ants on our playground. We have books about sharing toys and getting along with others when children show a need for those.

Reading quality children's fiction and non-fiction literature to your child daily is one of the best ways to prepare them for kindergarten. .

Erin