

The Three Little Pigs

For December the class read several different versions of the classic story, The Three Little Pigs. Students were asked to identify the differences in each version as well as participate in class activities related to the story. Those activities included; trying to blow down houses made of wood, straw, and brick, build their own houses from wood, sugar cubes, plaster, and retell their favorite version of the story using play-doh and story mats. 12-12

Students picked which material they will make their houses' from.
